in it.

About 4 o'clock in the morning they returned to him and said the job had turned out badly so far as money was concerned, as they had got only $55 and the cheap waten and pin of the night watchman. There was blood on "Crispy's" shirt, Hahn said. They told him how they had tied up the watchman with handkerchiefs and neckties, and how Lehman managed to loosen his bonds, and having made an attempt to prevent the robbery, "Frenchy" struck him over the head and he tumbled to the floor. The next morning when the men read of the crime in the papers they were all startled to learn that the watchman had been killed by "Frenchy's" blow. The police found that the details of Hahn's story corresponds with what Hahn's story corresponds with what is known of the crime. The men ar-rested were held in New Jersey Ave-nue Police Court without bail.
